DAVID DEWEY

WASH & GOUACHE

David Dewey of Owls Head and Blairstown, NJ will show recent works in watercolor with gouache. Dewey's 3 large paintings, measuring 31x45 inches were painted in 2008. They conclude a body of work Dewey has produced over the past 3 years, shedding light on the Breakwater paintings which hung in Dewey's show at the Caldbeck in 2006. This time the artist experimented with the addition of gouache over the transparent watercolor, resulting in a luminosity not before reached. 35 small paintings complete the exhibit; they measure from 4x6 inches to 10x14 inches. These pieces are pushed the furthest in their watercolor and gouache infusions. The artist describes these as "an explosion of small paintings that happened over a very short period of time". Dewey is represented in nearly every museum in Maine, as well as the Newport Art Museum in Rhode Island, Washington State University, and Rider University, and innumerable corporate and private collections.
