WATERCOLOR ON PAPER

The watercolor exhibit features the work of 8 artists. Dennis Pinette of Belfast, though well known for working in oil, will for the first time show the watercolors he began making in 2006; in this work, industrial subjects mingle with the ordered chaos of nature. David Dewey of Owl's Head and Blirstown, N.J. and Donald Holden of Monhegan and Irvington, NY, both masters of the sublime through watercolor, work in an atmospheric manner. Dewey's Rockland breakwater SUNRISE, measuring 35 x 57 inches, counters Holden's 6 dream-like images of Monhegan Island, Schoodic Point, and Acadia. Fred Kellogg of Thomaston and Washington, D.C. uses crisp lights and darks to paint portraits of his neighborhood streets both in Thomaston and D.C., just as Julian Sacks of Whitefield, gives us a glimpse of his hours spent watching his nearby waterfall. Also a Monhegan painter, Michael Torlen of Port Chester, NY shares with his viewer his meditations on incoming seas originated from far out in the Atlantic Ocean. Gilbert Cass of Montville and Kathleen Florance of South Thomaston both approach their subjects with abstraction. Cass's images of Mt Katahdin are rich with hot colors of fall; Florance's series on a bird's nest includes quiet investigation into shapes and then 3 larger watercolors incorporating a collage of abstract text messages.
