I grew up in Maine during the 70's and 80's in a large family of "back to land" parents. Until I was ten, we lived in a small cabin without running water or electricity. I spent most of my time outside and that gave me a huge appreciation of nature, which is the subject of a lot of my work. While I paint a variety of subjects, they need to strike me on a visceral level in order to catch my interest. I'm a self-taught painter, so I've had to find my own mechanism for articulating expression, and often the only thing that carries me through is a deep love for the subject and a desire to do it justice.
