Wind and Storm

In this collection I have tried to capture a quiet resonance of nature and subtle drama found in everyday landscapes. Working in watercolor allows for a fluidity and immediacy that reflects fleeting moods of the scenes - coastal storms rolling in with urgency, the stillness of trees casting long shadows, or the balancing movement of an afternoon sky. Each is an attempt to preserve a moment of clarity or contemplation, inviting the viewer to pause and look a little longer.

Most were painted from memories of pure impression, drawn the way watercolor abstracts from the edges of things - shorelines, fading light, seasonal shifts - places where change is felt more than seen. Whether it's a distant sail, a quiet grove, or the movement of birds at dusk, the subjects speak to something enduring. My hope is that viewers find familiarity, surprise, and a sense of connection to a world they reflectively recognize.
