NOTES TO SELF

The piece of land that lies between the comfort of my home and the tidal river that flows just beyond its edge, has given me 45 summers, 45 winters, and 45 years of all the inbetweens. The summers, to marvel at the explosive array of colors, textures and life that hides in its depths - the winters to watch wind and snow swirl their way through the pale stubble of frozen grasses, knowing well that the land just sleeps and will return color, texture and life to this space once again. The works are made from multiple materials, layered like the years themselves. Some pieces speak plainly, others murmur from beneath the surface. Time descends upon all of us and it is the harvesting of those deeply embedded memories that allow us to fully recognize the power of what surrounds us. It is not just a landscape - it is memory, witness, and home.
